BEST SPECIAL OFFER YET IN CAMPAIGN

18 PRIZE BALLOTS--9 TO EACH DISTRICT

District No. 1 comprises Napanee only—District No. 2 comprises all other points outside of Napanee—9 special Ballots for each District—Special over and above other regular and special votes.

Offer Closes Saturday Night, Dec'r. 23rd

Eleven o'clock p.m., closing hour of special offer—Ballots will be won with a few subscriptions—Second voting period closes Saturday, Dec. 16th—Make the most of the opportunity—Free Voting Coupon declining in value—Save them all, let none go to waste.

18 PRIZE BALLOTS

Nine Prize Ballots go to Napanee and Nine Ballots to Outside Points.

NAPANEE, DISTRICT ONE

For nine largest amounts turned in in subscriptions Dec. 11th to Dec. 23rd inclusive.

1st Prize Ballot 900,000 Votes
2nd Prize Ballot 800,000 Votes
3rd Prize Ballot 700,000 Votes
4th Prize Ballot 600,000 Votes
5th Prize Ballot 500,000 Votes
6th Prize Ballot 400,000 Votes
7th Prize Ballot 300,000 Votes
8th Prize Ballot 200,000 Votes
9th Prize Ballot 100,000 Votes

POINTS IN COUNTRY, DISTRICT TWO

1st Prize Ballot 900,000 Votes
2nd Prize Ballot 800,000 Votes
3rd Prize Ballot 700,000 Votes
4th Prize Ballot 600,000 Votes
5th Prize Ballot 500,000 Votes
6th Prize Ballot 400,000 Votes
7th Prize Ballot 300,000 Votes
8th Prize Ballot 200,000 Votes
9th Prize Ballot 100,000 Votes

Nine Prize Ballots for contestants in Napanee and nine Prize Ballots for contestants who reside at points other than Napanee is the big offer for extra votes in the Express Big Circulation Offer for this and next week, the offer closing at 11 o'clock Saturday night, December 23rd.

The nine Napanee contestants who secure to their credit the largest amount in [illegible] subscriptions [illegible] will be awarded the nine prize Ballots, one set to go to the nine highest for contestants who reside in Napanee and one set to go to nine contestants who reside at points other than Napanee.

What amounts have been turned in previous to this offer will have nothing to do with the offer.

The regular vote will be given on each subscription turned in by all contestants, also a special vote of 240,000 for a $12.00 club or pro-rated part thereof.

The regular and special vote will go to every one who get in subscriptions for the two weeks and the nine prize ballots for each district will be extra.

The second voting period for regular votes will close the contest Saturday night, December 23rd. A one year subscription this week will secure 30,000 regular votes, and 20,000 next week. Two years $5,000 this week and 70,000 the next. Three years 100,000 this week and 130,000 the next. The special vote will count the same for the amounts turned in for the two weeks, 240,000 for $12.00 or 120,000 for $6.00.

This is the big opportunity you have been no doubt working for, to get a good lead and maintain it until the close of the deal.

It is expected that the Prize Ballots will be won for comparatively small amounts in subscriptions on account of so many taking part in the drive. It is almost impossible for any one individual to secure but few subscriptions. Those who are fortunate enough to win the Prize Ballots will have a big advantage, and will in all probability win the best prizes.

Make your best efforts this week and be a winner

The Free Voting Coupon will continue to drop to a low rate and there will be no Coupon in the paper the last week. [illegible]

There will be no extra sample copies sent out after this and next week. The big opportunity is knocking at your door for this and next week. Get busy and win the Chevrolet.

THE FARMERS' DAIRY CO., LTD., EXTENDING

Great interest has been shown by everyone in town and surrounding country, in the fact that the Farmers' Dairy Co., Ltd., have almost completed an extensive addition to their plant, adjacent to this town. This matter must be of particular interest to the dairy farmers of this district.

It is only a little over three years since this company decided to locate in this district, and proceeded to erect a plant, having a maximum capacity of about 75,000 lbs. of milk daily. Before the end of the first year they very nearly reached the limit of their capacity. The second year and the one now coming to a close have proved that the farmers of the district are quick to appreciate and avail themselves of the best market for their milk.

While the prices of milk powder have declined, perhaps out of proportion to other dairy products, the Farmers' Dairy Co., Ltd., have done their utmost to repay the farmers, who have so loyally patronized them.

It may not be realized that this firm has paid to the farmers of this district, in the three years it has been operating, the handsome sum of over $500,000.00, for milk received by this Company.

Having proceeded with the enlargement of their plant to a capacity of 150,000 lbs. of milk daily, the Farmers' Dairy Co. are hopeful and confident that the milk producers hereabouts will appreciate their efforts, and will continue to give them the same encouragement and support which has so much helped them in the past three years.

For a large part of the year the producers here are indirectly in touch with the Toronto retail market, which is undoubtedly the best within reach of this section of the country. Of course they do not realize the net prices obtained in the immediate vicinity of Toronto, since overhead and transportation charges must necessarily be taken care of. And this favorable condition is practically assured, since the Farmers' Dairy Co., Ltd. have almost one hundred retail wagons delivering milk in Toronto and this number is being added to steadily.

It has always been, and still is, the policy of this Company, to give the farmer the largest possible returns for his labor in the production of milk, and if they are successful in securing sufficient milk to operate to capacity [illegible] to yield considerably better returns to the producer.

It is therefore to be hoped that the farmers in this vicinity will realize fully, what it means to them to have such a splendid outlet for practically all the milk they may see fit to produce.

4. On Friday, the 29th of December, 1922, the Mayor of the said Corporation shall attend at the Town Hall at twelve o'clock noon to appoint persons to attend at the various polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerks respectively on behalf of all the persons interested in and promoting or opposing this by-law.

5. The Clerk of the Council of the Municipal Corporation of the Town of Napanee shall attend at his office at the hour of twelve o'clock noon, on the 3rd of January, 1923, and sum up the number of votes given for and against this by-law respectively.

This by-law shall come into force and take effect upon the date of the final passing thereof.

Mayor. Clerk.

SCHEDULE "A"

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT made this day of November, A.D., 1922.

Between :—

THE FARMERS' DAIRY COMPANY, LIMITED, hereinafter called the Company of the first part,

and

THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWN OF NAPANEE, hereinafter called the "Corporation" of the second part.

WHEREAS the Company is the owner of the lands as hereinafter described and have erected thereon certain buildings for the purpose of their business as manufacturers and otherwise, and are about to enlarge their said factory premises, and

WHEREAS the said Company desires that the said Corporation of the Town of Napanee do give to them a fixed assessment of fifteen thousand ($15,000) dollars including business assessment exceptin[g] for the purposes of school taxation and local improvements for a period of ten years from the first of January, A.D., 1923, and

WHEREAS in order to fix the assessment of said Farmers' Dairy Company's lands as aforesaid it will be necessary to obtain the assent of the electors thereto.

NOW THEREFORE THIS agreement witnesseth that the said Corporation of the Town of Napanee does hereby agree with the Farmers' Dairy Company, Limited, to fix the assessment of the lands of the said Farmers' Dairy Company, Limited, together with all buildings and erections thereon and including business assessment except for the purposes of school taxation and for local improvements, at the sum of fifteen thousand ($15,000) dollars for a period of ten years from the first of January, A.D., 1923.

The lands of the said Farmers' Dairy Company, Limited, hereinbefore referred to are as follows, namely : All and singular that certain parcel or tract of land and premises, situate, lying and being in the Township of Richmond now in the Town of Napanee, in the County of Lennox and Addington, and Province of Ontario, and being composed of farm lot number twenty-three (23) in the second concession of the said township of Richmond, and being more particularly described as follows, that is to say : Commencing at the northerly corner of the said tract at a point on the western limit of the Camden Road three hundred and seventy-nine (379) feet measured northerly from the northerly corner of the Public School lot, thence westerly at right angles to the Camden Road and parallel to the Northern limit of the Vine tract ten hundred and forty-two (1042) feet more or less to the eastern limit of a road allowance leading to the Grand Trunk Railway, thence southerly along said easterly limit of said road allowance thirty-six (36) feet more or less to the northern limit of the Grand Trunk Railway right of way, thence easterly along the Grand Trunk Railway right of way three hundred and thirty (330) feet more or less to a fence running at right angles to the Camden road, thence easterly along said fence six hundred and sixty-two feet six inches (662 ft. 6 in.) to a fence forming the rear boundary of the tier of lots fronting the Camden road, thence northerly along said fence and parallel to the Camden road seventy-four feet six inches (74 ft. 6 in.), thence easterly along a fence one hundred and forty-seven feet six inches (147 ft. 6 in.), thence northerly along a fence one hundred and forty feet six inches (140 ft. 6 in.) to the Camden road, thence northerly along the westerly limit of the Camden road one hundred and fifty feet six inches (150 ft. 6 in.) to the place of beginning, and containing by admeasurement four and six-tenths acres (4 6-10) more or less together with a right of way forty (40) feet wide in common with the said Corporation extending from east to west across the northerly limits of the lands hereinbefore described.

The said Corporation further agrees with the said Company to submit a by-law to the electors of the said Town of Napanee for confirmation of this agreement at the time of the holding of the next ensuing municipal election pursuant to the statutes in that behalf.

This agreement shall be construed as enuring to the benefit of and as binding upon the parties hereto their successors and assigns respectively.

In witness whereof the parties hereto have signed by their proper officers and have affixed their corporate seals.

In the presence of

The foregoing is a true copy of a proposed by-law that will be taken into consideration by the Council after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication thereof, which date was on the 5th day of December, 1922, and

Take further notice that the day and places appointed for taking the votes upon said by-law shall be at the time and places for holding the next ensuing annual municipal election, and the time and place for attending to appoint persons to attend at the various polling places, and at the final summing up of the votes shall be as hereinbefore mentioned in the by-law.

TESTING FARMERS' SEEDS FOR PURITY AND VITALITY

The free government service provides through the Seed Branch Department of Agriculture's laboratory at Ottawa (417 Victoria St.) leaves no excuse for a farmer to plead ignorance next spring that he did not know he was sowing certain kinds of weed seeds or seed of low vitality, which might give him only a half stand of crop or less.

From now until February 1st, he may have up to ten samples tested free, along with a free mail delivery of the seed. When the trade becomes active in seeds and the testing staff is very busy as it is during the months of February March and April, it will cost every one 50c. per sample for a test. It seems reasonable to suppose that most farmers could have their seeds prepared for market before the end of January.

There are many farmers who prefer to sow Sweet Clover by itself, rather than buy it mixed with Red and Alsike Clover Seeds. How is he to know if the seed is in a sample or not except it be analysed ?

Such an examination should be of great value to growers of seed who wish to make the most out of their seed either sold for local use or for export.

The main check in the spread of noxious weed life is given when pure seed is sown on well cultivated land.

You may be preparing some seed exhibits for the Ottawa Winter Fair, why not avail yourself of a quick service that is awaiting to serve your best interests ?

THE SUNDAY LAW—WHAT? WHY?

DR. J. G. SHEARER.

The official title of our Sunday law is, The Lord's Day Act. It is not an ancient statute. It is very modern, both in time and nature. It came into force Mar. 1st, 1907. It was passed in 1906 by the Parliament of Canada after months of careful and thorough discussion by both Houses, and after dealing with every conceivable objection from the viewpoints of industry, business, pleasure, as well as from non-Christian and seventh-day Sabbatarian religion. The work was well done. Not a single amendment has been made to it since.

Its object was to conserve as a national heritage the weekly day of rest from toil, of industrial liberty and of opportunity for self culture and worship.

It does not aim to regulate the observance of the day in a religious way—which must be voluntary—but simply to preserve the Day as the inalienable right to every person. The law of nature imperitively requires one day's rest in every seven in the interest of health, efficiency, and life is a normal one. It is therefore imposed on human nature. It is written in our members. It is an inward law which we violate at our personal peril and at the sacrifice of national welfare.

It is a social law. It seeks to protect all toilers in their liberty. It calls for the observance of the Golden Rule "Do unto others, as ye would that they should do unto you." It calls for the exercise of self-denial therefore wherever this is necessary in order not to take away or menace our neighbour's right to his rest day.

It recognizes also that "the liberty of rest for each demands the LAW of rest for all." Rest for all must be compulsory in order that rest for each may be possible. There is no other way. Excepting only works of "necessity and mercy," all business, all buying and selling is forbidden. The same applies to all labor in one's own calling, or in any other line for gain. If men may work, greed will compel them to work. Even foods may not be sold on that day excepting only for consumption on the premises. Otherwise the baker and the grocer and their employees would be compelled to forego their rest day that others might be saved from having to think ahead and to purchase in advance what they will need on Sunday. So with the sale of news, tobacco, cigars, etc.

But what of pleasure ? Why should we not be able to take such pleasure as we think wise on Sunday ? The Sunday Law of Canada does not forbid pleasure in itself in any form but only such pleasure as becomes a business and involves labour on the part of others, and therefore robbing these others of their rest-day, rights that we ourselves prize so highly. Golf is lawful, but not employing caddies. Ball for the mere fun of it is allowed, but not professional ball where an admission fee is charged and it is made a business. This is the Sunday Law of Canada. In some of the Eastern Provinces the old Provincial laws forbid all "noisy games" but not the Lord's Day Act of Canada.

It is lawful to toboggan or sleigh ride down any hillside on Sunday, but not to operate municipal slides that involve the employment of labour for their operation. It is lawful to skate but not to run a commercial skating rink ; to bathe but not to run bathing pavilions involving employment or service. Thus the principle of not robbing others of their rest day in order to permit our indulgence in pleasures or mere luxuries on conveniences runs throughout the law. Is it not reasonable ? Is it not right ? Is it not essential to the largest measure of rest-day liberty to the greatest number of people ? Is it not fair and just thus to limit the liberty of some for the sake of the larger liberty of all.

The law also generously interprets "works of necessity and mercy." Conveying travellers and mails is permitted but not public excursions for pleasure, run for gain. The restaurant may operate but not the saloon or theatre or picture show, for these "unnecessarily" involve the labor of others. The druggist may sell medicines and appliances, "for the relief of sickness and suffering" but only for this purpose, and he may not sell cigars, tobacco and other sundries that it is customary for druggists to handle.

When the object and underlying principle of this law are understood, no good citizen, no one who respects his neighbour's rights and society's welfare will either violate its provisions or complain of its restrictions. It is wholesome. It is liberty-conserving. It is worth while. It is essential to the general good.

Will Crown Buildings.

Canada's new Parliament Buildings are soon to be crowned. All summer visitors have been asking, "When will the tower be finished?" The only answer forthcoming was that only a certain number of feet could be added each year to permit of the work properly setting. Now it is understood, the decision has been reached to finish the work without further delay. Arrangements are now being made to have the desicns for the superstructure on the topwork undertaken, so that the contract can be awarded this winter and the finishing touches on the imposing tower begun in the spring.

Primitive Arctic People.

The so-called "blonde Eskimo" of the Mackenzie delta and Coronation Gulf districts of the Arctic, are very primitive. Their weapons consist of bows and arrows made by themselves. Raw meat is their principal food, the diet varying only with the hunting seasons. In seal-hunting time seal meat is the daily bill of fare; in caribou time, only the caribou is eaten. Though the Eskimo may have both seal and caribou meat on hand at the same time, his peculiar beliefs forbid him to seat seal meat at caribou time and vice versa. Neither may he eat a land meat such as caribou when on what or ice, on which his village is located, he must live only on the flesh of the seal. When he takes to the land in the spring he must not eat seal flesh. He must not cook seal meat under a fire of land mosses. There is no wood in the Arctic, and moss forms practically the only land fuel. Neither must he cook caribou meat under a seal-oil flame. The breaking of either of these rules, says Rev. Edward Hester, a Church of England missionary who has spent ten years among these Arctic people, will call down upon his head the wrath of the departed, who are always very evil spirits, says the Eskimo.

SATISFYING THE PUBLIC

By J. E. MIDDLETON.

When gas was first produced for sale in Toronto the price was $5.00 a thousand cubic feet. No one complained seriously at the price, because the service was a novelty and the convenience it brought was appreciated highly. To-day such a price would be impossible in any Canadian community. The people have a fairly clear knowledge of production cost and would refuse to be "gouged" for the advantage of the Company. Convenience would be set aside as a secondary consideration.

Eight cents per kilowatt hour was not counted an unreasonable price for electric lighting in the early days of the industry. It is still a common price in large American cities where private corporations control the distribution. But in Ontario the people have been obtaining energy at rates far below eight cents. They have a complete understanding of the low production of energy generated by hydraulic means—since the service is organized on a Cost basis through the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. There are thousands of citizens who would be willing to do without electric light rather than to pay four or five times as much as Hydro-schedules. There are men to-day in tiny villages who complain to high heaven because Hydro-Electric is five cents the actual cost of the service. Naturally in a community with a small load and a scattered population the rate is higher than in a concentrated market. Yet they are being served for less money than the householder of Buffalo or Detroit.

Low rates and high-grade service have made the Hydro-Electric System successful beyond the dreams of its most enthusiastic advocates. Yet these rates, although apparently at rock-bottom have been ample to meet operating and maintenance charges both on the local and the co-operative plants. They have paid interest and sinking fund on an investment that is nothing short of enormous. They have provided a Renewals or Depreciation assessment year by year which is sufficient to build up a fund equal to the full value of the debenture and bond issues by the time they mature. On an average throughout the system thirty-three cents out of every dollar paid by a consumer for service applies on reserve account, and reduces by that much the burden of the capital expenditure. Rates have been reduced again and again. In many cases they are now 100 per cent. lower than they were when the first Hydro schedules were prepared, and 200 per cent. lower than the private company's rates in pre-Hydro times. The man who pays knows these facts and his convictions concerning the advantages of the Hydro-Electric System for himself and for the Province are copper-riveted and unshakable.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Helping Sick Women to Health

The two letters which follow clearly show the broad field covered by this well-known medicine. Women from every section—you know some in your own neighborhood—praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a wonderful medicine for troubles women often have.

From Prince Edward's Island—East

Miscouche, P. E. I.—"I had female troubles for two years. I always had a headache and a pain in my side and sometimes I felt so weak that I could not do my work. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken six bottles of it. It has done me a lot of good and I am still taking it. I will tell my friends of your medicine and hope they will try it."—Mrs. Camille Des Roche, Miscouche, P. E. I.

From Saskatchewan—West

Wadena, Sackatchewan—"A friend in Rose Valley recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and it has been a great help to me. I recommend it and you can use this letter as a testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. Peter Nobbis, Wadena, Saskatchewan.

SAFEGUARDING THE WIDOW'S ESTATE

REV. PETER BRYCE.

I am impressed again and again with the evident necessity of safeguarding, in some manner, the estate of the widow. It has been my privilege in the past two years to examine nearly 4000 family records, and with the tragic frequency the record tells of small estates dissipated by foolish investments.

A few days ago I noted that a widow left with an insurance of $2000 had invested $1500 in a gold mining stock of no value. Quite frequently the widow is induced to purchase oil stock with the promise of large interest returns. Every worthless form of stock figures in investments made by the widow. Unscrupulous men undoubtedly prey upon the widow and follow up all information given in announcements in the press respecting the probation of wills.

It is amazing to note, also, how the widow's money is loaned out to relatives and friends without security. One instance of many is that of a widow with $3000 from insurance. A brother-in-law borrowed $600, a brother $500, and a sister-in-law $1,000 to enable her to purchase a house. When the widow needed the money she could not obtain it. A father-in-law, in another case, borrowed $1,000, and could not pay it back when it was needed. A brother, in another case, borrowed $2500 to help him in establishing a small business; the venture was unsuccessful and the money could not be recovered. Neighbours and friends have, again and again, united in relieving the widow of her cash assets, usually promising a good rate of interest, but unfortunately, in many instances, the security has been extremely doubtful.

One man secured a loan of $2000 from a widow on the promise of giving a $10,000 insurance policy made out to her as security. Some time afterwards she consulted a lawyer in regard to the transaction, and ascertained that the man had only once half-yearly premium on the policy. The policy had lapsed and the man had left the country.

The annuity plan, as now advocated by insurance companies, or arranging the estate so that an income only is available, would save many widows from financial disaster.

A Sarnia Nurse Abroad.

Miss Emma M. Wood, a Sarnia, Ont., nurse, is in charge of one of the first tuberculosis hospitals established in the Levant. It is located at Yedi-Koule, a suburb of Constantinople, and is maintained by the Armenian Relief Fund Association of Canada and Near East Relief for the treatment of war orphans who have developed the dread disease. Because it was equipped with Canadian funds it is known as the "Canadian Hospital." An extensive clinic is also maintained in connection with the hospital, where treatment is given the youngsters of Constantinople who are found to be suffering from tuberculosis.

One hundred and fifty orphans, ranging in age between three and fourteen, are cared within the hospital proper. The treatment is good food, fresh air and sunlight. Dr. C. H. Clark, Oberlin, Ohio, has charge of the clinic.

Fifty per cent. of the children cared for are Armenians, 30 per cent. are Greeks and the others are largely Russians. The hospital buildings belong to the Constantinople Wreck Hospital, by whom they were turned over to the Canadian and American relief workers.

RUPTURE IS DANGEROUS

Don't always be compelled to wear a truss and don't live in despair. If you are troubled with rupture you can be restored to soundness in your own home without operation or danger. Anyone ruptured, man, woman or child, should use Thompson's Renowned Rupture Remedy. It softens the calloused edges of the broken lining and puts it in a healthy, growing condition so that the opening may close naturally. Thompson's Renowned Rupture Remedy is really a wonderful discovery and wonderful results will be obtained from its use. It is guaranteed to give relief provided directions are accurately followed. If satisfactory results are not obtained the purchase price will be refunded. A full sized bottle contains a three months treatment which is sufficient in most cases. Mailed to any address in Canada upon receipt of $5.00. Send money order or marked cheque. Do not send money in letter without registering.

Fell Against Saw.

On Monday afternoon Mr. Albert Davis, who resides on the Wiggins farm, on the Belleville road, had the misfortune to slip against a wood cutting saw. One bone in his arm was completely sawn through, the second bone about half way through and the flesh of his arm torn and cut. Mr. Davis was carrying a log of wood to the saw and his foot slipped throwing his right arm against the rapidly revolving saw. Dr. Hall was immediately summoned and after giving the injured man first aid treatment took him to the Kingston hospital.

Tree Repairing.

An interesting bulletin entitled "Tree Repairing" has been issued by the Forestry Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa. It describes and illustrates the different methods of repairing trees, dealing chiefly with the filling of cavities and the bolting of trees that have split at the crotch. The bulletin gives a great deal of useful information on the subject. Tree repairing is a science in itself and nowadays, especially in the eastern sections of this country and the United States men specially trained for the work operate on trees much as dentists operate on teeth, cleaning out the cavities and filling them with concrete or asphalt, bolting together trees that threaten to split in two, fixing up trees that have been damaged by wind, lightning, live stock or the carelessness of man. Tree repairing has become a profession and at least one school has been established for teaching the work. Anyone requiring a working knowledge of the business could acquire a good deal of information from the bulletin mentioned. It is free for the asking from the Director of Forestry, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Re Christmas Decorations.

Following our usual custom at this season of the year, we draw your attention to the danger to life and property from Christmas decorations such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, etc. Displays of this nature, and the lighting arrangements in connection therewith, add very considerably to the ordinary risk of fire. See that inflammable material is clear of and not hung over heating and lighting devices, steam pipes, stove pipes, electric light bulbs, etc. See that your electrical circuits are properly fused and not overloaded by the addition of temporary lights. Examine your fire extinguishing appliances and see that they are sufficient, in good order and readily accessible. See that all exits are plainly marked and not obstructed. Remember that nothing can render these displays absolutely safe, and that if accidents are not to mar the festive season, constant vigilance and care must be exercised.

Valuable Books Free.

The man or woman who is acquainted with The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal never ceases to wonder how, in these days of vastly increased production costs, the publishers can continue to turn out a paper of seventy-two pages every week, crammed with the best of reading matter suited to all tastes and profusely illustrated by original engravings—all for the modest sum of two dollars per year. And now, capping this superlative value, the publishers announce the distribution of a limited number of valuable books, free of charge, to new subscribers and to present subscribers as rewards for sending in new subscriptions. Any one of five books may be selected (1 "The New Farmer's Manual," compiled and published by The Family Herald and Weekly Star, without question the best book of reference ever offered to the Canadian farmer; (2) "The Family Herald Cook Book" complete, scientific but non-technical; (3) "100 of the Best Songs"; (4) "100 Singing Games"; (5) "Album of Sacred Songs." Truly this is giving value in full measure, pressed down and running over. The Family Herald announces that this remarkable offer is made for a limited period only, and the rule is, first come, first served. The books will not be sold for cash at any price.

Hockey League.

It will come as rather a surprise to the many hockey fans in Kingston to know that Kingston may be in another league this season besides the O.H.A. and the intercollegiate. Arrangements are being made for the formation of a league comprising Belleville, Napanee and two teams from Kingston, one of these two being not overloaded by Mr. Jack H. S. Derry, of Napanee, who is one of the prime movers of the proposed new league, was in Kingston on Thursday to broach the subject to local hockey men, and before he left the city he was practically assured of one team at least. Mr. William Palmer, manager of the Y.I.C.B.A. team, the champions of the Kingston City League last year, was approached on the matter and seemed quite enthused over the plan, but he would not yet definitely say as to whether the Irishmen will enter the league or not. The other team from Queen's may be entered soon, but should Queen's not care to enter, there would only be one team from Kingston. Mr. Derry went to Belleville Friday and interviewed the Belleville hockey men about the subject and they are quite enthusiastic over the formation of a league of the nature proposed. It is likely that a team will be entered very soon from Belleville in the league and with one from Napanee, and one from Belleville, and one or two Kingston teams the league should enjoy a great deal of popularity.—Kingston Standard.

BALLADE OF BRAVERY, ETC.

When Beauty lives upon the page
And pleads for every man his cause,
We shall behold a gracious age,
With Love and Learning for its laws
And all the Master Artist draws
Our souls upon this larger plan,
Time shall write a golden clause;
"The Printer is a worthy man."

Of old he was the tranquil sage
Who delved among the wisest saws;
He toiled from dawn to dark, his wage
The pleasure of his heart's applause.
To-morrow, dim as through a gauze
I see, and Beauty in the van
Bears a sign at which they pause:
"The Printer is a worthy man."

And so to you I throw the gage!
Eschew the beast of Greed, his maws,
And light the world with love;
life's stage
Is dark with needless ugly flaws.
Come, put a shoulder to the jaws,
Of Hate, Untruth, and all that clan.
The power is yours to use, because:
"The Printer is a worthy man."

Phelps Power and Light

This is the dull season of the year—short cloudy days, and long dark nights.

The chores must be done with the lantern which is most inadequate and dangerous. Only last week a large barn and contents were burned, caused by a pigeon flying against a lantern, knocking it down.

Not so when buildings are lighted with Phelps light.

Then Phelps power will saw your wood, grind your grain, pump your water, wash your clothes, and numerous other work about the farm 365 days a year, simply by touching a button.

We would be glad to demonstrate, at any time, the superiority of Phelps over other systems on the market.

A $12,000 LOSS IN TAMWORTH FIRE

Fire which broke out shortly after midnight on Monday night of last week, destroyed the feed mill and electric light plant at Tamworth, owned by Mr. A. B. Carscallen, doing damage estimated at $12,000. Workmen had been operating the electric light plant until 11.30 and when they left the mill everything was in good shape. Less than an hour later the entire plant was in flames and despite heroic work by neighbors, the frame, steel-coated building was a mass of ruins. As a result the town of Tamworth will be without lights till the mill can be rebuilt, which will be a month at least. There was $5,000 insurance on the plant and contents.

HAILEYBURY.

It Was a Residential Suburb of a Silver Camp.

Haileybury, the chief sufferer in the disastrous Northern Ontario fire, was like a Roman for the silver region. It lies some five miles northeast of Cobalt, and has been, in a sense, the residential suburb of the great silver camp. While Cobalt was purely a silver-mining city, there are no mines at Haileybury, but rather a collection of modern residences and hospitals, such as any goou-sized town in Ontario might own, with pride. A little further to the north is New Liskeard, a commercial town and market for a farming district, for this is the commencement of the clay belt at the top end of Lake Timiskaming.

Cobalt has the energy and the rough-and-ready appearance of a mine camp. Blocks lie everywhere and the streets wander up and down hill in a manner to make heavy people breathless. There is not to be seen on a main street a boarding and everywhere are signs of industry which is too busy to keep things clean. There is scarcely a tree, and the acres of dirty tailings probably have aided in many a decision, by those who could arrange it, to live in more hospitable surroundings. This gave Haileybury its chance, and the town on the hilly shore of Lake Timiskaming thrived and served a main purpose.

Trees lined its streets, and fine brick houses told of the comforts sought and found by many who had business interests elsewhere. A School of Mines was one of its educational advantages and the Roman Catholic Hospital was ambitious for a town of this size.

New Liskeard lies at the mouth of the Wabi river, and a good start has been made in the last fifteen years in tapping the riches of the adjacent soil. It was New Liskeard and its neighborhood which first revealed the wealth of the Nothland for farm purposes. Since its development there has been a steady movement of settlers, many of them from the adjacent counties of Quebec, to seek young timber in the timbered areas at a time when the tendency was in too great a degree to rush to the prairie wheat lands that did not require clearing.

Another Landmark Removed.

One of the landmarks of the Niagara Peninsula is to be removed. It is the huge temple or pantheon at Grimsby Park, or Grimsby Beach, as it is now known.

This immense amphitheatre, which has echoed the voices of the greatest speakers of modern times, will be pulled down if means can be found to handle the job. The structure has been condemned.

Grimsby Park was founded as a Methodist camp ground, and when used as such vast crowds of people would assemble in the pantheon to hear such noted preachers as Sam Jones, Henry Ward Beecher and others as well known.

It is believed the Salvation Army opened its Canadian work at Grimsby Park. In the old days the gatherings at Grimsby Park were noted far and wide, and men and women would journey there from all directions to spend a week or so attending the lectures and addresses.

HELP HELPLESS BLIND BABES

A Dominion Charter, without stock subscription, was recently obtained for the establishment in the city of Ottawa, of a Home, Nursery, Hospital and Kindergarten, for the blind under six years of age, free to all from any Province in the Dominion. So far nothing has been done for those poor unfortunates. According to reports received from the various Provincial authorities there are at present nearly 250 in the Dominion. The late Sir Arthur Pearson, before his death, claimed that "Sunshine Home," at Chorley Wood, England, was the only home in the Empire for blind babies." It is hoped shortly to have the SECOND in Canada. To this end money is urgently required. Help us with your generous gift. "Lest we forget; Do it now!" Cheques should be made payable to the Canadian Blind Babies Home Association. Remittances will be promptly acknowledged.

STORE BURNED AT YARKER

The village of Yarker was threatened by what might have been a serious fire on Wednesday morning, when flames were discovered in the roof of a frame building containing the residence and ice cream parlor and confectionary store of J. T. Main. Fortunately the volunteer workers with a bucket brigade were able to confine the flames to the Main's building, which was totally destroyed. A blaze broke out in the frame house of J. Warner, a short distance away, but the volunteers subdued it before it did much damage.

Fanning by the high wind which was blowing it was early seen that the blaze in Mr. Main's building could not be controlled, so attention was given to removing what could be reached of the stock and a close watch was kept on the surrounding buildings to prevent the spread of the fire. Considerable of the stock in Mr. Main's store was removed.

So great was the danger of the spread of the flames at one time that the villagers got into communication with the Napanee Fire Department, and arrangements were made to send the engine and a number of firemen, when another telephone message was received the information that the fire was under control, and that assistance would not be needed.

"COLD IN THE HEAD"

is an acute attack of Nasal Catarrh. Those subject to frequent "colds in the head" will find that the use of HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will build up the system and render them less liable to colds. Repeated attacks of Acute Catarrh may lead to Chronic Catarrh.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is taken internally and acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions.

DESERONTO.

The question for debate on Friday evening at Parish Hall was "Should Orientals be excluded from Canada." Clarence McVicker and Bernard Gaulin presented the affirmative side and won the decision of the judges, Leo Therrien, Thomas Maloney and J. C. Burns. Ed. Dorey and Ed. Haig spoke in the negative. The girls' chorus sang very interestingly. Carl Blackburn received well. The boys' chorus sang "Freckles," creating much amusement. Miss Mary McVicker recited nicely and a well executed musical sketch, "Mother," was presented by Miss Clara Dunn as mother and Miss Jean Genereaux as daughter. The question for next Friday night is "Which is more beneficial, farm or city life?" Edmund and Joseph Dowling will present the farm side of the question while Lemuel Bruyer and Adrian Brennan will stand up for the city.

The Strange Case of Cavendish

By RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "The Devil's Own," "My Lady of the North," etc.

(Copyright, by Randall Parrish)

One of these caught sight of her, and fired, the bullet chugging into the end of a log, so closely it caught a strand of her hair, but, before another shot could follow, she had seized the shutter, and closed the opening, driving the latch fast with the revolver butt. She was cool enough now, every nerve on edge, realizing fully the danger of their position. All the blood of a fighting race surged through her veins, and she was conscious of no fear, only of a wild exultation, a strange desire to win. As she turned she faced Cavendish, only vaguely visible in the twilight caused by the closed window.

"Are you hurt?"

"No—not—not much. He knocked all the wind out of me, I—I'm all right now."

"Get up then! There's fighting enough ahead to make you forget that. What happened?"

"He—he kicked me, I guess. I—I don't exactly know. I heard you go past us into that other room, and—and just turned my head to see. The next I knew I was on the floor. I thought I was going to faint. Did I get him with the knife?"

"No, it's over there, and I am afraid I didn't touch him either; it was all so sudden I got no aim. Do you hear those voices? There must be a dozen of the band outside already."

He looked up at her, his glance almost vacant, until she could but perceive how his chin shook.

"What shall we do?"

"Do!" She gripped his shoulder. "Are you a man and ask that? We will fight! Did you imagine I would ever surrender myself into the hands of that devil after what has happened? I would rather die; yes, I will die before he ever puts hand on me. And what about you, Mr. Cavendish? Are you going to lie there moping? Answer me—I thought you were a gentleman."

The words were like a blow in his face, and under their sting he staggered to his feet; scarlet blazed in both his cheeks.

"You have no right to say that to me," he said angrily. "I'm not that kind."

"I know it," she admitted, "but you lose your nerve; this isn't your game. Well, it isn't mine either, for the matter of that. Nevertheless it has got to be played, and we're going to play it together. Those fellows will be at that door presently—just as soon as Mendez tells them who are inside here. They'll try us once and, if we can bent them back, that will give us a breathing spell. Two of us ought to hold them for some time."

There was a shouting of commands without in Spanish, punctuated by oaths, the meaning of which the girl alone understood. She leaned forward, her eyes on the door, the cocked revolver held ready. She had meant what she said to Cavendish, her mind death was far preferable to any surrender to that infuriated Mexican; she expected death, but one hope yet buoyed her up—Westcott. He would come; she had faith in that—and he would find she had fought to the end, even if he came too late. She buried her face in her hands, stifling a sob that shook her body, yet when she lifted her head again there was no glimmer of tears in her eyes and her cheeks were crimson. She waited motionless, scarcely seeming to breathe—the statue of a woman at bay.

All this was but for a moment, a moment of swift thought, of equally swift decision. The next Cavendish stood beside her, grasping the shotgun, no longer a victim of weakness, his eyes meeting hers eagerly.

"I could only find twelve cartridges," he exclaimed, "but I know how to use those."

He took a step forward and held out his hand.

"Forgive me, Miss Donovan," he pleaded. "Really I do not know what makes me like that, but you would make a man out of anybody."

Her firm, slim fingers met his eagerly, her eyes instantly glowing in appreciation.

"Of course I forgive you," she exclaimed. "Your fear is no greater than my own. I am a woman and dread this sort of thing. All that gives me courage is the knowledge that death is preferable to dishonor," her voice lost its firmness, "and—and my faith in a man."

"You mean in possible rescue?"

Her eyes lifted to his face.

"Yes, Mr. Cavendish. It may prove all imagination, yet there is one—a real man, I am sure—who must know of my plight before this. If he does, and lives, he will come to me. If we can only defend ourselves long enough there will be rescue."

A blow struck the outer door, and was repeated, evidently dealt by the butt of a gun; then the two, standing silent and almost breathless within, heard Mendez' voice.

"Senorita, and you also, Senor Cavendish," he called, his words intended to be conciliatory, "it is of no use that you resist. We are many and armed. If you surrender and not fight I pledge you protection."

The girl glanced at Cavendish.

"You answer him."

"What shall I say?" he whispered.

"The man lies; he will keep no promise once we are in his power. Besides they have not yet found Caterus. When they do there will be no thought of mercy."

"Then we will fight it out?"

"I shall; I will never give myself into the hands of that creature."

"Senor," and Cavendish stepped aside to the protection of the logs, "we will not surrender. That is our answer."

"Fools!" he called back, his voice rising harsh above the growling of others. "We will show you. Silva, Felipe, quick now; do what I told you. We will teach these Americano dogs a lesson. No, stand back! Wait until I speak the word."

A faint glimmer of light through one of the log crevices caught Cavendish's attention and he bent down, his eye to the crack, one hand grasping the barrel of his gun. Stella watched him motionless and silent, her face again pale from strain.

"I can count about a dozen out there," he said finally, his words barely audible, and his eye still at the slight opening. "All Mexican except two—they look American. Most of them are armed. Ah! Wait! The fellows have searched the cells and discovered Caterus. Do you hear that yell? It will be a fight in a finish now. Here come two men with a log—that's their game, then; they mean to smash in the door."

He straightened up, casting a swift glance about the apartment. All besiliency, doubt, had left him now that the supreme test had come. He was again capable of thinking clearly and acting.

"Miss Donovan," he burst out, "we can never hope to hold back those men here—in this room. We shall be a bright light as soon as the door is battered down and then, if they crush in the window also, we shall surely be attacked from two sides."

"What will be better?" she asked.

"The back room; it is dark, with no windows, and there are strips nailed between the logs. We can force that heavy wooden bed across the door and hide behind it. We ought to hold them there as long as the logs last, unless they set the cabin afire. Good God! They have begun already. Three more blows like that and the door goes down. Come; it's our only chance."

It was the work of a moment; it had to be. The inner room was so dark they had to feel their way about blindly, yet those splintering crashes on the outer door, interspersed by the shouts of the men, spurred both to hurried effort. Nor was there much to be done. The heavy bed was thrown upon its side and hauled and pushed forward until it rested against the door inside, the mattress and blankets low caught and held as to form protection against bullets. Breathless the two sank to their knees in the darkness behind, their eyes on the brightening daylight of the room beyond. Already a hole had been stove through the upper panel of the door, the surrounding wood splintered. Some one fired once through the jagged opening and an exultant yell followed from without.

"No firing!" the voice was Mendez', rising sharply above the other sounds. "I don't want the girl shot, you fools. Take that other log around to the window. They'll come out fast enough once we're inside. Now, another one. Here, five of you swing her!"

With a crash the remaining wood gave way, the end of the log, used as a battering ram, projecting into the room. Over the shattered door, now held only by one bent hinge, a half-dozen forms swarmed inward, the quick rush blocking their passage.

Cavendish pulled trigger, the deep boom of his shotgun echoed instantly by the sharper report of the girl's revolver. She fired twice before the swirling smoke obstructed the view, cautious only that one man there leaped straight into the air and another had sprawled forward on hands and knees. Cavendish pushed home a fresh cartridge and the smoke cloud lifted just enough to permit them to perceive the farther doorway. A Mexican lay curled up in the center of the floor, his gun a dozen feet away; another hung dangling across an overturned stool, but the opening was vacant. Just outside a fellow, wounded, was dragging himself out of range.

"Great Scott!" exclaimed Cavendish, excitedly. "Every shot counted. Here, load up quick. They'll try the window next. Get down!"

The warning was not an instant too soon, the hasty volley largely thudding harmlessly into the thick mattress, although a bullet or two sang past and found billets in the logs behind. Cavendish returned the fire, shooting blindly into the thick smoke, but the girl only lifted her head, staring intently into the smother, until the cloud floated away through the door. The attackers had again vanished, all semblance of them, except those two motionless bodies.

"Looks as though they had enough of it," he said grimly, "and have decided to starve us out."

"Oh, do you think so? I heard a noise then."

He heard it also, his glance returning instantly to the front, his form stiffening into preparation. For a moment neither could determine the meaning of the sounds. Then he cocked his gun, the sharp click echoing almost loudly in the stillness.

It Was Done So Quickly Neither Fired.

"Trying the window this time," he murmured. "Do you hear that? Be ready."

The two knelt motionless, peering over the edge of the bed into the dim twilight, seeing nothing, each with finger on trigger—tense, expectant. Then, without warning, the flying figure of a man leaped across the doorway into the security of the opposite wall. It was done so quickly neither fired, but Cavendish licked his parched lips with a dry tongue.

"I'll get the next one who tries that trick," he muttered. "It will be easier than partridge shooting."

A minute—two passed, every nerve on edge; then a second flying form, crouching low in the gathering gloom, shot across the narrow opening. The shotgun spoke, and the wildly leaping figure seemed to crumble to the floor—its lower half had reached shelter, but head and shoulders lay exposed, revealing gray hair and a white mustache. Cavendish sprang erect, all caution forgotten.

"It's Mendez," he cried. "I got the arch-fiend of them—"

A rifle cracked and he went plunging back, his body striking the girl, and crushing her to the floor beside him. There was no cry, no groan of agony, yet he lay there motionless. She crept across and bent over him, almost dumb with fear.

"You—you are shot?" she made herself speak.

"Yes; they've got me," the utterance of the words a struggle. "It's here in the chest; I—I don't know how bad; perhaps if you tear open my shirt, you—you might stop the blood."

She could see nothing, not even the man's face, yet her fingers rent the shirt asunder and searched for the wound. It was not bleeding greatly, and she had no water, but not knowing what else to do, she tore a strip from her skirt and bound it hastily. He never moved, or spoke, and she bent her head closely to the wounded man had lost consciousness.

Alone, in the dark, she crept on her knees to her place behind the barricade. Her hand touched the empty gun he had dropped, and she reloaded it slowly, only half comprehending its mechanism. The revolver, every chamber filled, rested on the upturned edge of the bed; her lips were firmly pressed together. Quietly she pushed forward the barrel of the shotgun, and waited.

CHAPTER XIII.

A Needle in a Haystack.

The little marshal of Haskell had the reputation of being as quick of wit as of trigger finger. Startled as he was by that sudden apparition appearing before them in the dark road, and at being addressed by a woman's voice, the mention of the name Cassady gave him an instant clue. There was but one Cassady in camp, and that individual's reputation was scarcely of a kind to recommend him in the eyes of the law. If any woman sought that fellow in this out-of-the-way spot, it was surely for no good purpose. Brennan leaned forward over his saddle horn, lowering his voice confidentially, and managing to achieve a highly meritorious brogue.

"Sure, Ol'm Cassady," he admitted grouchily. "How iver come yer ter guess that?"

"You were expecting to meet Mr. Enright, weren't you? That was what Bill Lacy told you. He was to explain to you just what you were to do."

Brennan mumbled something indistinctly, now thoroughly aroused to the situation.

"Fruit-a-tives" Restored Him to Health

"For three years, I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and my general health was very bad. I consulted a physician and took his medicine but I did not improve; and finally he told me that I could not be cured.

At this time, a friend advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". After taking two boxes, I was greatly relieved; and this fruit medicine made me completely well. My digestion and general health are now splendid".

"Well, Mr. Enright couldn't come, and Lacy is over across the creek yet, hunting down Ned Beston's murderer. I am Miss La Rue," she hurried on, almost breathlessly, "and I've brought you Lacy's note, which you are to give to that Mexican—Pascual Mendez. You understand? You are to give it to him, and no one else. Lacy said you could kill your horse, if necessary, but the note must be there by daylight tomorrow. Here—take it."

Brennan thrust it into an inner pocket, and cleared his throat. There was no small risk in asking questions, yet, unless he learned more, this information might prove utterly useless. The note to Mendez meant little until he discovered where that bandit was to be found.

"Shure now, miss," he said instnatingly, "Mr. Lacy must hev' sint more instructions long with ye then them. All ther word the iver come fer me was ter saddle oop, ride down herr an' mate this man Enright. I don't even know fer shure whar ol' Mendes is—likely 'nough he be in Mexico."

"In Mexico!" indignantly. "Of course not. Lacy said you knew the trail. It's a place they call 'Sunken valley'—out there somewhere," and Brennan could barely distinguish the movement of her arm desertward. "It's across that sand flat."

"Shoshone?"

"Yes; I couldn't remember the name. That's all I know about it, only Lacy said you'd been there before."

"Shure, miss," assured the marshal softly, clearly realizing that he had already gone the limit, and that any further questioning must lead inevitably to trouble. "If it is Sunken valley I'm ter ride ter, that's aisy."

"Then it's good night."

She vanished up the side trail, as though the wind had blown away a shadow. Brennan gathered up his reins, straightening his body in the saddle. He glanced back toward the dim shade of his companion, chuckling.

"Some bit of luck that, Jim."

"Doesn't seem to me we know much more than we did before," Westcott answered gloomily. "Only that the man Mendez is at a place called Sunken valley. I never heard of it; did you?"

"No; I reckon it's no spot the law has ever had any use for. I've supposed all along them Mexican cattle thieves had a hide-out somewhar somewhar in this country; but nobody has ever found it yet. Right now, thanks to this Miss La Rue, I've got a hunch that we're goin' to make the discovery, and put Bill Lacy out of business. But there's no sense of our gassin' here. We got a right smart bit o' ridin' to do afore daylight."

"How about the note she gave you?"

"We'll wait a while to read that. I don't want to strike no light just yet. Maybe it had best be kept till daybreak."

The men rode steadily, and mostly in silence, a large part of the way side by side. The animals they bestrode were fairly mated, quite capable of maintaining their gait for several hours, and needing little urging. The night gloom enveloped them completely; their strained eyes were scarcely able to trace the dim outlines of the ridge road, but the horses were desert broke, and held closely to the beaten track. Then Westcott's pony, which carried by far the heavier load, began to show signs of fatigue. They drew up, and the marshal dismounted, searching about blindly in the darkness.

"Too d——n dark," he said, coming back, and catching up his rein. "A cat couldn't find anything there; but there's firm sand. Wait a minute; I've got a pocket compass."

light illumined his face for an instant, and then went out, leaving the night blacker than before.

"That's south," he announced, snapping the compass case shut, "and this blame wind is southeast; that ought to keep us fairly straight."

"The ponies will do that; they'll keep where the traveling is good. Shift this bag back of your saddle, Dan. You ride lighter, and my horse is beginning to pant already; that will ease him a few pounds."

The transfer was made, and the two men rode out into the rear desert, urging their animals forward, trusting largely to their natural instinct for guidance. They would follow the hard sand, and before long the scent of water would as certainly lead them directly toward the spring.

Yet it was not long until dawn began to turn the desert gray, gradually revealing its forlorn desolation. Westcott lifted his head, and gazed about with wearied eyes, smarting still from the whipping of the sand-grit. On every side stretched away a scene of utter desolation, unrelieved by either shrub or tree—an apparently endless ocean of sand, in places leveled by the wind, and elsewhere piled into fantastic heaps. The breeze slackened, somewhat as the sun reddened the east, and the ponies threw up their heads and whinnied slightly, increasing their speed. Westcott saw the marshal arouse himself, straighten in the saddle, and stare about, his eyes still dull and heavy.

"One h——l of a view, Jim," he said disgustedly, "but I reckon we can't be a great ways from that spring. We've been ridin' right smart."

"It's not far ahead; the ponies sniff water. Ah! there's a bunch o' green ahead; that'll likely be Badger springs."

Assured they were beyond pursuit, the two unsaddled and turned the ponies out to crop the few handfuls of wire grass which the sweet water bubbling up from a slight depression had coaxed into stunted growth. There was no wood to be had, although they found evidence of several camp-fires, and consequently they were obliged to content themselves with what they could find eatable in their bag. Except for a few sentences neither spoke, until Brennan, having partially satisfied his appetite, drew forth the note given him by Miss La Rue, and deliberately slashed open the sealed envelope.

"In the name of the law," he said grimly, hauling out the inclosure. "Now we'll see what's the row. Lieb smoke! It's in Spanish! Here, Jim, d' you read that fine print?"

"I know words here and there," and Westcott bent over the paper, his brows wrinkling. "Let's see; it's not quite clear, but the sense is that Mendez will be paid a thousand dollars for something—I can't make out what, only it has to do with prisoners. 'As it says he'll be there to confer with him some time tonight.'"

"Lacy write it?"

"Yes; at least he signed it."

"Well, if Lacy aims to meet Mendez tonight, he ought to be along here soon after nightfall. How'd it do to hide in these sand hills and wait?"

"We can do that, Dan, if we don't hit any trail," said Westcott, leaning over, his hand on the other's knee, "but if we can get there ourselves first, I'd rather not waste time. There's no knowing what a devil like Mendez may do. Let's take a scout around, anyhow."

They started, the one going east, the other west, and made a semicircle until they met, a hundred yards or so, south of the spring, having found nothing. Again they rode out, plowing their way through the sand, and all at once Brennan lifted his hand into the air and called. Westcott hurried over to where he stood motionless, staring down at the track of a wagon wheel. It had still a slight activity, and had left a mark so deep as not yet to be obliterated. They traced it for thirty feet before it entirely disappeared.

"Still goin' south," affirmed the marshal, gazing in that direction. "Don't look like there's nothin' out there, but we might try. Let's saddle up."

It was a blind trail, and progress was slow. The men separated, riding back and forth, leaning forward in the saddles, scanning the sand for the slightest sign. Twice they encountered an undoubted wheel mark, and once traces of the whole four wheels were plainly visible. These could be followed easily for nearly a quarter of a mile, but then as quickly vanished as the wagon came again to an outcropping of rock. Yet this was assured—the outfit had headed steadily southward.

This was desperately slow work, and beyond that ridge of rock they discovered no other evidence. An hour passed, and not the slightest sign gave encouragement. Could the wagon have

Children Cry for Fletcher's CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. turned in some other direction? In the shadow of a sand dune they halted finally to discuss the situation. Should they go on? Or explore further to the west? Might it not even be better to retrace their way to the springs, and wait the coming of Lacy?

Brennan was for turning back, arguing the uselessness of going further, and the necessity of water for the ponies.

"Come on, Jim," he urged. "He sensible; we've lost the trail, and that's no fault o' ours. An Apache Indian couldn't trace a herd o' steers through this sand. And look ahead thar! It's worse, an' more of it. I'm for stalking Lacy at the springs." He stopped suddenly, staring southward as though he had seen a vision. "Holy smoke! What's that? By God! It's a wagon, Jim; an' it come right up out of the earth. There wasn't no wagon there a second ago."

For a moment both men suspected that what they looked upon was a mirage—its actual existence there in that place seemed impossible. Yet there was no disputing the fact that yonder in the very midst of that desolation of sand a wagon drawn by straining horses was slowly moving directly toward them. Westcott, was first to grasp the truth, hastily jerking the marshal back to where the tired ponies stood with drooping heads behind the protection of the dune.

Westcott lay outstretched on the far side of the dune, his hat beside him, and his eyes barely able to peer over the summit, ready to report observations to the marshal crouched below.

"It's Moore's team, all right," he whispered back, "and Matt is driving them. There isn't anyone else on the sent, so I guess he must be alone."

"We can't be sure of that," returned Brennan, wise in guarding against surprises. "There was another fellow with him on the out trip and he might be lying down back in the wagon.

We'd better both of us hold em up. I can hear the creak of the wheels now, so maybe you best slide down. Is the outfit loaded?"

"Traveling light. I should say," and Westcott, after one more glance, crept down the sand heap and joined the waiting marshal. Both stood intent and ready, revolvers drawn, listening. The heavy wheels grated in the sand, the driver whistling to while away the dreary pull and the horses breathing heavily. Moore pulled them up with a jerk as two figures leaped into view, his whistle coming to an abrupt pause.

"H—l's fire!" was all he said, staring dumbly down into Brennan's face over the front wheel. "Where in Sam Hill did you come from?"

"I'm the one to ask questions, son," returned the little marshal, the vicious blue barrel shining in the sunlight, "and the smarter you answer the less reason I shall have to hurt yer. Don't reach for that gun! Are you traveling alone?"

Moore nodded, his hands up, but still grasping the reins.

"Then climb down over the wheel, Jim, take a look under that canvas; Moore, here, is generally a genial sort o' liar and we'd better be sure. All right—hey? Then dismount, Matt, and be quick about it. Now unbuckle that belt and hand the whole outfit over to

"Where In Sam Hill Did You Come From?"

Westcott; then we'll talk business together."

He shoved his own weapon back into its holster and faced the prisoner, who had recovered from his first shock of surprise and whose pugnacious temper was beginning to assert itself. Brennan read this in the man's sulky, defiant glance, and his lips smiled grimly.

"Getting bullish, are you, Matt?" he said, rather softly. "Golly! ter keep a close tongue in yer head; so that's the game? Well, I wouldn't, son, if I was you. Now, see here, Moore," and the marshal's eyes were like flints. "You know me, I reckon, an' that I aint much on boys' play. You never heard tell o' my hittin' anybody just for fun, did yer?"

There was no answer.

The Austrian Loan.

That Canada will have any share in taking up the Austrian loan is regarded unlikely, though officially nothing is available as to the prospect of participation. That such participation would be unpopular with Parliament is regarded as practically certain, particularly in view of the experiences of this country with the Roumanian loan, which has so far been practically a dead loss to the Dominion.

RUPTURE IN THE FOAL

How to Deal With Umbilical Scrotal Hernias.

How Rupture Is Caused—Umbilical Hernia Not Usually Serious—Treatment of Scrotal Hernia Essentially a Surgical Operation.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The term Hernia, or Rupture, is applied to designate a condition consisting of the protrusion of a portion of the intestine or bowel from the abdominal cavity through a normal or abnormal aperture of the abdominal wall, which protrusion shows its presence by a lump or tumor-like mass, with the skin remaining intact as a covering or enclosing sac.

Umbilical Hernia.

In the case of Umbilical Hernia or rupture at the navel, the condition generally appears within a few weeks after birth. It consists of the protrusion of a portion of the bowel through the navel opening in the floor of the belly, the skin remaining intact, forming a covering sac or pouch. Its presence becomes noticeable by the appearance of a round soft lump, or tumor like mass, at the navel. Should doubt exist as to whether the condition is actually one of rupture, its true nature can be readily determined by placing the foal on its back and by pressing and manipulating the lump with the hand. It will be found that the bowel can be returned to the abdomen, leaving a somewhat loose pouch of skin, and the aperture by which the bowel protruded can be felt as an oblong or ring like opening, thus distinguishing it from any other swelling. As soon, however, as the foal is allowed to regain its feet, the bowel once more protrudes into the sac of skin and the lump or tumor like mass again appears at the navel.

The size of the rupture varies from that of an egg to a large-sized ball.

Treatment.—As a rule, rupture at the navel in foals is not a serious condition, except when of large size. Those of small size tend to disappear in a large number of cases with growth and development of the animal. Recovery can be assisted by means of a truss or supporting bandage. The foal should first be placed on its back, and the lump or tumor manipulated with the hand to return the protruding bowel into the abdomen. To prevent the bowel from again escaping, a pad or small cushion is placed over the navel opening and retained in position by a truss or supporting bandage, such as a leather band or canvas girth encircling the body, fastened up over the back, and prevented from slipping forward or backward by means of a breast band and breech band. The only objection to the use of a truss or bandage is, that it may chafe the skin if not properly applied. In the case of small ruptures, a good blister applied to the skin around the navel has a good effect, as the swelling which it causes helps to close the opening and prevents the bowel from again escaping.

If the foal reaches the age of four or five months without showing any improvement, and the rupture tends to enlarge instead of decrease, it may require an operation to overcome it. The most common methods of operation are by means of wooden clamps, skewers, and ligaturps. In applying these, the foal must be placed on its back, and care taken to have the bowel contents of the rupture sac returned to the abdomen. The skin forming the pouch or sac should then be grasped by the hand and drawn out as far as possible from the body, and the clamps or ligature fixed tightly and securely over the skin, close up against the navel ring or opening. The clamps or ligatures are then allowed to remain in position until they slough and fall off together with the imprisoned skin and tissues.

Scrotal Hernia In Colts.

Scrotal Hernia, or rupture at the scrotum, affects male animals only and may be present at time of birth, or appear within a few weeks thereafter. This form of rupture consists of the protrusion of a portion of the bowel into the scrotum or bag, together with the testicles. Its presence is noticeable by the increased size of the scrotum.

Treatment.—The treatment of Scrotal Hernia in ordinary colts consists essentially of a surgical operation, the method usually followed being castration by what is known as the covered operation, which should be undertaken only by the veterinary surgeon. As a rule colts intended for work purposes, affected with this form of rupture, should be operated on early in life, and in most cases before the animal is much over one year old, as the chances of successful results decrease with age, while, in the case of foals and yearlings, the operation is invariably successful.

In the case of pure-bred colts, valuable for breeding purposes, surgical interference is warranted only when the hernia is a source of danger to health. The best plan in such cases is to allow nature to take its course in the hope that with growth and development of the animal the hernia will become reduced.—Dr. C. D. McGilvray, President Ont. Vet. College, Guelph.

Large Apple Crop.

The United States had a liberal apple crop this year. The September forecast was a total production of about 206,000,000 bushels, or 5,000,000 bushels higher than the August forecast. Last year the crop was short, with a total of only 98,000,000 bushels. The average production of the preceding five years was 179,000,000 bushels. The maximum production was 252,000,000 bushels in 1914. The number of farm orchards is gradually decreasing, and commercial orchards are increasing. This year's crop is materially smaller than last year's in the box apple section of the Pacific Northwest, but materially larger than last year's in the Eastern States.

SUCCESS AND FAILURE

In Raising Young Pigs for Real Profit.

Pithy Paragraphs Full of Facts About Feeding Them — Fertilizers for Fall Wheat — Pregnant Ewes Require the Best of Care.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Causes of failure and success in the feeding of young pigs are pointedly put in the following article:

Causes of Failure In Feeding Young Pigs.

1. No one on hand to see that everything is right when pigs are born.
2. Excess of fat in mother's milk.
3. Cold, damp, uncomfortable quarters.
4. Intestinal parasites.
5. Shortage of sweet skim milk at weaning time.
6. Ration out of balance.
7. Ration composed of unsuitable grains.
8. Lack of mineral matter in food.
9. Housing conditions unsuitable.
10. Diseases—hog cholera, etc.
11. Neglect to alter male pigs at proper time.
12.—Neglect to supply ample feed for proper development, regularly.
13. Working with poor stock.
14. Treating the pig as a general scavenger.

Success In Feeding Young Pigs.

1. Mother's milk normal.
2. Clean, dry, bright, comfortable quarters.
3. Practice of disease preventive measures.
5. Ample yard room, protection from hot sun and flies.
6. Ample clean drinking water and wallow, during hot weather.
7. Mineral matter and conditions supplied during winter when on the soil conditions are not available.
8. Working with well bred, vigorous stock.
9. Ample supply of green forage, such as alfalfa, red clover, sweet clover, rape and blue grass.—L. Stevenson, Sec. Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Fertilizers for Fall Wheat.

Fall wheat must have a strong well-rooted plant to withstand the winter. To insure this there should be an abundance of all kinds of available plant food in the soil. The two constituents the wheat plant has the greatest difficulty in getting out of the soil are nitrogen and phosphorus. If the land has been manured and summer fallowed, or, if a clover sod has been ploughed down there will probably be no need of purchasing a further supply of nitrogen and an application of acid phosphate alone will probably be sufficient. If, on the other hand, the wheat is to follow oats, or if there is any fear that the plants will not develop a good top, then some form of readily available nitrogenous fertilizer may be used to advantage.

Cereal crops have little difficulty in getting their supply of potash, consequently it will rarely pay to purchase a fertilizer containing this constituent for application on the land to be sown to wheat.

The Department of Chemistry at the Ontario Agricultural College has found that an application of from 200 to 400 pounds of acid phosphate and 100 pounds of ammonium sulphate per acre has very much increased the yield of wheat on the clay soils predominating in the Niagara Peninsula and in the area lying along the north shore of Lake Erie. It is probable, however, that when the soil contains a good supply of organic matter, enough to furnish sufficient nitrogen, the ammonium sulphate may be omitted.—Chemistry Dept., O. A. College, Guelph.

Pregnant Ewes Need Best of Feed and Care.

Lambing time is perhaps the most important season of the year for the shepherd. A successful lambing period helps to make a successful sheep year. It then behooves every shepherd to have as high a percentage of strong, healthy lambs as possible. The lambs, and perhaps here and there a ewe, that he will save by good feed and care will amply repay him.

If the ewes are to lamb before going on pasture they should receive some grain about one month before lambing. This insures a good flow of milk. Oats and wheat bran, either half and half or two parts of oats and one of bran, which is lower in price, should be fed. One-half pound a day of this mixture for each ewe should prove sufficient.

It is also very important that succulent feeds, such as corn silage or roots, be given pregnant ewes. These keep the ewes in good condition and serve as general tonics and regulators. The weight of the wool can also be increased by feeding good succulence. All winter long each ewe should receive daily from two to two and one-half pounds. After lambing this amount can be increased. It should be remembered that no frozen silage or roots should be fed to sheep. Either is very dangerous. The flock should be supplied with pure, fresh water at all times and barrel salt should be placed within their reach so that they can get it at will.

An order-in-council has been passed in Saskatchewan making it legal for farmers to shoot, out of season, wild ducks which are damaging grain crops. Many reports have been received from districts where the birds are causing much havoc in the grain fields.

Canadian Hay In Britain.

Canadian prices for the new crop are far too high for the Glasgow market, according to the Dominion Trade Commissioner at that point. Insofar as Scotland is concerned, the new crop is now arriving at £6 5s, while Canadian hay is being offered at £6 5s to £7 per long ton c.i.f. Glasgow for September-October shipment. Canadian offers range as high as £7 15s c.i.f. Glasgow, which is out of sight. One importer states that as far as Scotland is concerned there should be sufficient home hay to meet the requirements; but this is no reason why Canadian exporters should not ship to Scotland, as Canadian timothy has an excellent reputation. As in the case of many other commodities, it is a matter of getting prices down in order to get into the market. As regards Ireland, Belfast importers state that there is an abundant crop of hay this season in the north of Ireland, and that prices locally for the best hay are from £4 to £5 per ton. The information is volunteered, however, that timothy and clover mixtures from Canada are well liked, and later on, when there is not so much speculation involved in autumn shipments, the possibility is that business may be obtained.

Summer Weather and Flies.

Hot weather and flies gain a great many calves. It is advisable to protect the young animals very carefully during the fly season. Spring calves are never allowed by some breeders to pasture the first summer, but are kept in shaded pens away from the heat and flies. Fall calves, likewise, are not allowed pasture during the hot days, but are turned out at night into small paddocks or exercise pens. Unless the calf is getting plenty of grain, washy grass may do it more harm than good.

Ontario's Onion Crop.

The latest official figures from Ottawa of agricultural crop estimates indicate that the total crop of onions in Ontario this year will probably prove to be twice as large as last year and of excellent quality.

Small Garden Will Often Pay Big.

It is possible to make the garden pay big dividends for the amount of labor put upon it if that labor is well directed. A space 50 x 100 feet will, if properly planned and worked, give a supply of practically all vegetables, except potatoes and a few other coarse vegetables, for a family of four the whole year. It must be rich soil, well cultivated, and a plan followed that will use the space all the growing season.

Help burned Ontario over the Winter!

MEN and women of Ontario—it is time that we should all realize the terrible completeness of the fire calamity that devastated Northern Ontario in the early days of October. Fires and calamities we have had before, but never such complete destruction as this.

Over 1,200 square miles laid desolate, town after town nothing but a bleak expanse of ruins, hundreds of farms swept bare, thousands of your fellow citizens "cleaned out" and thrown abruptly back into man's primeval struggle against nature and her grim forces: fire, hunger, ice and the stark northern cold.

Give 1,800 families a fighting chance to get on their feet. Temporary relief must go on. We must not fail the North.

Winter—the relentless foe

Coming as this terrible fire did, in the autumn, with the harvests in, with the townspeople already preparing for the rigors of winter—the complete destruction wrought is the harder to overcome.

Thousands of people at first had literally no place to lay their head, little to wear and nothing to eat. They had to be taken care of at first, somehow, and then, desperately as the days went by, and the cold grew more intense, rough but serviceable standard shacks, 16' x 20', have been replacing tents, old street cars, packing boxes and sheet iron—a regular food supply has been established, and rough clothing is being distributed.

What can a man do with his house a blackened hole in the ground, his barn a charred heap, his work shop a twisted pile of rubbish—and a northern blizzard raging over all?

Temporary Relief Until Spring

In the name of humanity we must see these fellow citizens through until Spring opens up the land and general business activities are resumed. Money must be forthcoming from the citizens of Ontario, from municipalities, industries, societies, public bodies, lodges, churches, etc.—not for rehabilitation or re-establishment, but for the supply of bare necessities, "temporary relief" in fact, to the stricken North.

The Brighter Side of the Picture

Everywhere throughout the fire swept district one hears only a strong, manly note of confidence, of resolution to go forward, to "stick to the country" if body and soul can be held together, to make good once more, to restore the hundreds of burned farms, to rebuild the eight or ten destroyed towns—And it will be done if the stream of temporary relief from Old Ontario does not dry up!

All for One—One for All

Here is a portion of our Province in ruins, and for the sake of the whole Province as well as for its own sake, this section must be restored to prosperity and happiness. We need the North, we need its vigorous, pioneering spirit so one and all, let's give a hand into the saddle"—and do it NOW.

Money is needed. The Relief Committee can buy in large quantities, get big discounts, and often free gifts of merchandise from the many manufacturers who are generously co-operating with the Committee. The exact needs are now known.

The Northern Ontario Fire Relief Committee has been enlarged and now is thoroughly representative of the Province of Ontario. The Provincial Government is co-operating to the fullest extent and is doing everything that a Government can properly do to assist in temporarily relieving the fire sufferers.

To give immediate relief the Committee must secure actual cash without delay. If each municipality or county would devise some means of raising an amount equal to one half mill on the total assessment the relief can be continued. The raising of relief funds could be undertaken by public spirited citizens, clubs, churches or councils and provides a most deserving cause for Christmas giving. Now it is up to every community in Ontario to help a neighbouring district in its hour of trial. Make cheques payable to—

WELCOME, WINTRY WINDS?

What did you do with your summer's dough?
It's gone; and you hate to tell.
Soon we'll have both hail and snow,
It sure would make one yell.
But! we should worry! let it come,
The wintry winds we'll greet.
For we were shod at the Hospital
And we shall have dry feet.
Hog! Dog! nor devil, do we fear,
For our understanding's good:
Our sox are dry, our feet are glad,
We did as wise fool's should.

Mr. Jos. Light has purchased the lumber and machinery in the Midmer mill.

Mr. Jas. E. Fenwick has purchased a harness shop in Desoronto and has moved to that town.

Mr. Frank Smith has assumed the position of caretaker and messenger of the Bank of Montreal.

License Inspector Walter Exley rounded up a still at Flinton last week, also finding 10 gallons of mash.

Mr. Percy Vine, who has opened an electrical shop on the market, has secured the contract of wiring the new addition to the Farmer's Dairy Co. building.

The Napanee Collegiate Girls' Basketball teams were badly defeated in the championship games in Kingston on Saturday. Both senior and junior teams lost.

The Empire Cafe on John street is getting its new place of business on Dundas street fitted up and expects to open business in the new stand on Christmas Day.

Mr. Thos. Blute, manager of the Napanee rink, reports that he is getting a nice body of ice on the rink and will have the rink open for skating in a few days, should the weather remain cold.

On Tuesday evening last, Mrs. Freshman entertained a number of friends and read a paper on her trip to Norway, the North Cape and Spitzbergen, with souvenirs of the journey. Mrs. Laidley, of Kingston, favored the company with selections on the piano.

An electric motor is being installed in the waterworks pump house and will be connected to one of the pumps, giving the town waterworks system three means of pumping water. The gasoline engine and the electric motor will both be used as auxiliary pumps.

The body of the late Hiram R. Willard reached Kingston from Lake Superior on Thursday afternoon. It was taken to Stella Friday morning on the C. S. L. tug Weaver, and the funeral took place Friday afternoon from his father's residence to Stella cemetery, Rev. Mr. Dixon officiating.

John Calder, 28, of Chatham, was released Thursday afternoon when police told Magistrate Gundy that they had no evidence to support the charge of fraud preferred against him by R. Briscoe, former mayor of Chatham. Briscoe was fleeced out of $20,000 by a gang of Montreal confidence men, and Calder was arrested because he had talked about the case. He had been at liberty on bail of $20,000.

The concert and lecture given in the Napanee Armouries on Friday evening last by the congregation of Trinity Church, drew an exceptionally large crowd. Nearly all the available seats were occupied and the net proceeds will amount to a nice sum. The programme was given by Belleville talent and the lecture by Principal Taylor, of Queen's University, Kingston. Both programme and lecture were highly appreciated and the committee in charge are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking.

St. Mary Magdalene's Church was filled to the doors on Sunday evening, on the occasion of the visit of the Bishop, the Right Rev. Dr. Bidwell. A class of thirty-one candidates was presented by the Vicar for confirmation, and the solemn service of the Laying on of Hands was very impressive. The Bishop preached a very beautiful and helpful sermon, based on the text, 1 Cor. 13-9, 10: "For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come then that which is in part shall be done away." Mrs. Powell sang a very appropriate solo, "Lead me, Lord," set to an old Welsh melody a favorite of Lloyd George.

KIDDIES ARE DREAMING OF JUST SUCH THINGS AS THESE

Don't disappoint them on Xmas morning. We have trains that are sturdy and strong.

Naturally every boy loves a train, and he wants a train that will go and one that will keep on going. He wants a train with lots of track, too. This season we are featuring "The Canadian National Railway" trains. The engines of these setts are extremely well built and with ordinary care will last for years. Every car is nicely decorated in bright colorings. Ask to see our $2.50 special value. Some are less others are more.

OUR PICTURE AND STORY BOOKS ARE WELL ASSORTED

You mothers will like the quality of our books this year. We have paid very special attention to the papers, the type, the construction. These numbers are in stock now. Cinderella, Three Little Kittens, The Three Bears, The Night Before Xmas, Mother Goose, My Dobbin, Nursery Songs, Ted Marsh, Buffalo Bill, Our Darling, Tot and Tim, Boy Scout.

NOTHING PLEASES BETTER THAN DOLL CARRIAGES

Our range of carriages this season leaves nothing to be desired when it comes to beauty and value. Nearly all are equipped with rubber-tired wheels. The gear is exceptionally strong. The bodies are gracefully shaped and made from reed or solid wood. Some have reed hoods, others are leatherette. Colors of Cream, Grey, Black and Navy. Priced from $295 up.

EVERY WOMAN LOVES A GIFT OF CUT GLASS

We have many useful pieces.

Your Xmas Gift Problem will be quite pleasingly solved by choosing any one of these following pieces of Quinte Cut-glass. Sugar and cream setts, Marmalade jars, Water setts, consisting of pitcher and glasses, Sherbets with plates to match, Separate Pitchers, Fruit Bowls, Cut-glass Serving Trays, Vases or Water jugs.

This very nice quality glass-ware comes very gracefully and skilfully cut, the patterns are neat and well assorted.

In comparison you will find our prices very, very good values.

See the table on display in our Toy-Land.

GIFTS FOR THE HOME

We have a magnificent stock of Floor-lamps, shades, frames, trimming.

Floor-lamps are accepted by home decorators as a part of every well balanced room. They are effective from a standpoint of light as well as from a standpoint of beauty. Our present stock offers you a wide range of choice lamps. The posts are gracefully carved in numerous designs and are well proportioned. Mahogany and Walnut are the two outstanding finishes. The shades come in a unique variety of shapes and colors.

We also make shades to your order from materials of your own choosing. Our stock of trimmings is most complete.

Posts, wired complete with two-light cluster are priced at $12.20 each.

Posts, wired complete with three-light cluster are priced at $22.50 and $17.50 each.

Quality, Service, Value.
